Emma is an international student currently studying in Taiwan for one year. She is curious about Taiwanese culture and wants to explore local events during her stay. She relies on official platforms to explore Taiwanese culture but struggles due to lack of structured and practical information. She prefers to plan her activities in advance and make informed decisions based on clear and structured information.

Background

Personal Behaviors

- Reads event descriptions carefully
- Compares different options
- Detail-oriented and organized
- Uses filters when available
- Plans activities in advance

Needs

- Clear and structured event information
- Practical details (time, location, price, transportation)
- Filters (date, location, type, budget)
- A planning overview (calendar view)

Goals

Primary Goals:

- Discover cultural events in Taiwan
- Plan activities ahead of time
- Find relevant events quickly
- Avoid wasting time searching

Motivations:

- To efficiently plan her cultural activities during her limited stay in Taiwan
- To make informed decisions by accessing clear, reliable, and well-structured information
- To maximize her cultural experience without wasting time searching or missing relevant events

Frustrations

- Too much unstructured information
- Difficulty finding key details quickly
- Lack of practical information (price, location, etc.)
- Too much time spent searching

“I want to see all the activities clearly and quickly understand if they fit my schedule.”
